

About Universes and Love Rooms

One night in early August farmer Phil forgot to close the entry gate of their barn which was connecting the barn with the meadow. Usually he did that every night after he had finished serving dinner to his milk sheep and Kari. For some reason during that very night he forgot.

Kari and Karo were taking that chance to do a little night walk. They have never been out during night and they were curious about the secret life of darkness. It was enjoyable warm outside, so even Kari felt pleasant. He was a bit worried before.

Very soon they discovered that the world was completely different at night than it was during the day. The sounds of the insects had changed, the air smelled different, the grass tasted special and more juicy, the flowers were hiding their colourful petals and even the wind felt different in their wool. They both loved their adventure, but their most

INCREDIBLE, OUTSTANDING, OVERWHELMING, STUNNING, MIRACULOUS, TERRIFIC, WONDERFUL, AMAZING, SPLENDID, EXCEPTIONAL, REWARDING, SOUL-TOUCHING, BREATH TAKING discovery was ...

the S K Y!!!

Thousands and thousands of shining, glittering, golden stars decorated the endless immensity of space. Kari and Karo were captivated by the indescribable beauty of the universe which was presenting its vastness in front of their sparkling eyes. Speechless they wandered to the big walnut tree, laid down on their backs, leaned with their heads against the trunk, stroked each other and stared at the stars. They felt timeless. There was nothing else than them and infinity. After a while - no one really knows how many light years have passed by then - Karo broke their silence.

I wonder if they are staring at us as well?

Who?

The stars ... and who- or whatever lives on them!

For sure ... for sure, they are already waving at us!

There must be someone else out there.

There is so much space in Space!

Most likely they are making fun of us silly, primitive Earthlings ...

No Karo ... I'm sure they like us and I'm sure they have already worked out a rescue plan to support us. I believe, they have already started sending their prophets to guide us on our odyssey ...

Maybe YOU are one of them! Hehe!

Kari looked at Karo with a biiiiiig warm smile. Karo started giggling. She felt touched and looked in Kari's huge, brown eyes. She felt they were different today, deeper. Looking at his eyes JUST NOW created the same inner peace in her as looking at the universe.

It was Kari's universe.

It was endless and infinite as well!

It was full of life, love and peace. It felt familiar, but also unknown.

At the same time, when she was still looking into Kari's eyes, she realized that she could not only see the depth of Kari's inner universe, she could also see herself. She saw herself reflected in his beautiful eyes. His eyes were a deep, infinite universe on its own and a mirror of other deep, infinite universes.

She felt connected. She felt one with him. She felt united. She felt united with the world through Kari. She felt Love. She felt Love in her, through her, out of her, in him, through him ... She felt it everywhere and she enjoyed it tremendously. As she was staring in Kari's eyes and enjoying her/his/their Love, she realized something. She realized that they were only able to create Love together because they were giving each other enough room for this activity. In the vastness of Kari's and Karo's inner universes there was enough room for themselves, for their SELVES. It was their room. It was not a living room ... or a bathroom ... or a storage room ... or a bedroom ... or a chatroom ... it was a LOVE room ... it was THEIR LOVE room ...

Actually, it was more like a workshop. A LOVE workshop! How gorgeous! He had one and she had one and in addition they had one together. As she realized that, she felt like a little, magic elfe. She felt, they should stick together. She felt, they were a brilliant team, a brilliant LOVE-creator-team who could create huge amounts of Love together and share it with everyone! Karo felt so tremendously motivated and encouraged to create Love ... more and more and more of this beautiful Love ... The world needs it for sure, she thought! There can never be too much of it, she thought! There could never be an Overproduction of LOVE, she thought!

From the bottom of her heart, through herself, around the globe, through the universe and back, she hoped that Kari, her brilliant LOVE-creator-team-mate, would join her on this mission ...

FOREVER and EVER and EVER and EVER!
